KAH'LOCA

a new outdoor performance celebrating female strength and resilience

Available Summer 2026

Under the artistic direction of Laura Kenyon, WomanEwer provides a connection between women through the arts and offers a safe space to explore ideas around female empowerment, survival and resilience using movement, voice and visual art.

KAH'LOCA is an hispanic-styled outdoor work of dance-theatre for four to six women. Dressed in bright colours with flamboyant funky headpieces, the performers use a vigorous movement style and their voices to challenge the narrative of what it means to be a woman and bring to public attention the scale of violence against women.

The colours & aesthetic of the KAH'LOCA costumes are inspired by the famous Mexican painter & feminist icon Frida Kahlo, symbolising a desire for everyone to have their own voice, to speak out, be bold and step up for themselves, empowering the harmed and shaping once mute spaces. A combination of voices, classical guitar song, gritty percussive sounds and protests creates the overall soundscape, overlapping with the breath of the dancers in motion to create a multi-sensory live performance which celebrates female strength and resilience.

KAH'LOCA is scaleable and can flexibly encompass casts from children to older adults. There is an option for the performance to be preceded by a 25 minute parade by the performers to guide the audience to the performance area.
